TITLE: ANTHONY GIDDENS' THEORY OF STRUCTURATION IN TERMS OF THE PROBLEM OF SOCIAL ORDER

ABSTRACT

'Why people to continue orderly social life with other people?', 'Why people everywhere to live in relationship with each other everyday?', 'Is commitment and relationship between people compulsory or voluntary?', 'What keep together society?', 'What explains the social integration?', 'How is society possible?' This questions are most frequently expressed in the literature of social science. This questions lies at the source of the problem of order which is one of the central problems of science in general and social science in particular.

By so many thinkers since ancient Greek World discussed the problem of social order, has a multilayer structure. The problem is, human nature, interpersonal relations, social groups, micro-social structure from many national and international relations in dimensions.

The problem which addressed in different contexts and routes in the literature of social sciences analyzed in terms of structuration by Anthony Giddens. Giddens gives priority to the ontological reasoning and has spread to social theory wants to overcome dualism. Giddens' analysis of the problem of social order rather is characterized in that plane. Giddens does not think of the problem of social order as a matter of connecting the individual to the community, a moral consensus and an inspection/control issue. For Giddens, the problem of social order, with various sub-systems of a whole social system is a matter of time and space that connects how. In other words the problem of social order is a problem how the different element gains to character by connecting different places and times. Giddens' style of this approach to the problem of social order has a distinctive position in the literature of social theory.

Accordingly the thesis consists of two axes. The first axis was created in order to demonstrate which the problem of social order intellectual background has created a critical reading. The other axis of the thesis created a way of handling the problem of social order in the context of Anthony Giddens's the theory of structuration. The aim of the thesis is put forward how the problem of social order is understanding in the literature of social theory with critical reading and points to the importance of the problem of social order, and also Anthony Giddens's notion of the problem of social order demonstrate the strategic position in the tradition.
